Neighborhood Watch Success Story

What makes a SAFE Neighborhood Watch group successful? Well, to the team here at SAFE, we think that just starting a Neighborhood Watch group is a success! Sometimes people can be too busy or too reluctant to take an active role in organizing their block and making it safer. But even just a few persistent and focused residents can prove to ignite a local effort in starting an organized network of neighbors. Overcoming the hurdle of motivating others to become involved is a success. After that, only more successes are sure to follow.

Neighbors around 19th and Capp streets are taking initiative to see less crime and violence in their neighborhood... and to stay informed. They contacted SAFE, and with the help of Jon Shepherd, they started a Neighborhood Watch group. After only a few months of meeting to discuss their concerns, they have learned how to take action to make the area safer. Captain Stephen Tacchini of Mission Station attended their meetings, and they now have a clearer, more effective, way to communicate with the police. They also learned how to observe and report suspicious activities, and were educated on personal safety best practices. The group now has 60 members, with 9 committees working on various issues. This Neighborhood Watch group is headed in the right direction! You can also read about their story HERE .

Thanks to all of our active Neighborhood Watch groups in San Francisco for your efforts in creating a safer city!
